In the last four years, the company didn't increase prices for the six-layered aseptic package and instead relied more on improving internal efficiencies in production as well as increasing sales.

"There is tremendous cost-led pressure on us now and in the coming six months operating margins will at least remain under pressure. But we are working on improving internal efficiencies to combat higher production costs," said Ashutosh Manohar, managing director of South Asia markets, at Tetra Pak India.

terior location within the complex. The Commission noted that the change of location of the tower was not in dispute, and concluded that the builder had tricked the couple by either showing them a flat in a different tower or by altering the layout.

The Commission held that the Vig couple could not be compelled to accept a flat in a location different from the one shown to them. So it was incumbent on the part of the builder to revise their allotment appropriately or refund the money along with suitable compensation.

Accordingly, by its order of August 24, 2018, delivered by Justice V.R. Jadhav, the National Commission held that Vig's demand for a refund of ₹2,920,895, along with 10 per cent interest from the date of payment of each instalment was reasonable. The complaint was allowed.

run the risk of being closed down. They also lack the resources to hire a large enough team that can provide a steady stream of investment ideas to the fund manager. While large-sized funds may find it difficult to outperform in the small-cap category, size is not a big concern in the large-cap category.
